On your FAFSA application, your parent(s)/stepparent indicated they were a dislocated worker. As part of the verification process, we are in need of clarification regarding parental dislocated worker status. In general, a person may be considered a dislocated worker if he or she:

- Is receiving unemployment benefits due to being laid off or losing a job and is unlikely to return to a previous occupation.
- Has been laid off or received a lay-off notice from a job.
- Was self-employed but is now unemployed due to economic conditions or natural disaster.
- Is a displaced homemaker. A displaced homemaker is generally a person who previously provided unpaid services to the family (e.g., stay at home parent), is no longer supported by the husband or wife, is unemployed or underemployed, and is having trouble finding or upgrading employment.

Please note: Except for the spouse of an active duty member of the Armed Forces, if a person quits work, generally he or she is not considered a dislocated worker even if for example, the person is receiving unemployment benefits.

Please check one:

- One or both of my parent(s)/stepparent are a dislocated worker(s) as defined above.
- We answered incorrectly. Neither parent(s)/stepparent are dislocated workers as defined above.
